

NYC producer and artist WAJU announces official name change to Harrison First

Berlin, Jan 21, 2019 (IssueWire.com) - Producer, musician, and collaborator known as WAJU have officially assumed the moniker Harrison First for his project as of 2019.

With the artist now operating under the name of Harrison First, he admits: "I changed my name because I was really getting tired of being confused with the other artist names WAJU. Even though my profile is growing steadily, I still wanted to change it to Harrison First.

Harrison is my American/Middle name and FIRST is apart of my production company/brand JNRY FIRST."

The New York-born, Sweden-based artist released has released a stream of stellar pop/RnB singles over the past 2 years via labels such as Majestic Casual, Lowly Palace, Lowly, Bonfire Records, and most recently his own entity JNRY FIRST.

Supporting outlets for previous releases include Billboard, Pigeons and Planes, MTV, Acid Stag, Dancing Astronaut, EarMilk, and Milk. "4 Me" was featured in the TV Show "The Challenge XXX". His music has been played in Adidas stores in London, New York, and Tokyo.
