

Rhythm Tribe Re-Defines Message In A Bottle

- Acid Latin Band Makes 40-Year-Old Police Classic New Again. -

Los Angeles, Jan 14, 2019 (IssueWire.com) - In this time of Instagram, Twitter, Facebook, and other influential social media, the rock classics don't get easily noticed. There are millions of young music lovers around the world who have never heard of The Police. But through the hypnotizing vocals of Brisa Guzman-Sanchez, and Rhythm Tribe's Acid Latin musical style, have molded "Message In a Bottle" into something fresh. The song, originally released in 1979, is presented with a haunting and passionate new sound to a younger generation. This stripped down re-imagining of this 40-year-old classic takes this old track and makes it new.

"Sting would love this," says Beth Broday, the co-director of the new music video. The simplicity of the unique production makes the song totally different and new again. Rhythm Tribe is made up of a family, a father, a son, a daughter, and a friend. This group is more like a modern-day Staple Singers (70's group). The recordings have inspired famed director/choreographer, Kenny Ortega to write, "The Band sounds great. The [Guitar] playing is exceptional! The kids are beautiful and so gifted!" It is this type of response combined with young listeners, which has allowed Rhythm Tribe to carve out a niche in a saturated, cookie cutter music industry.

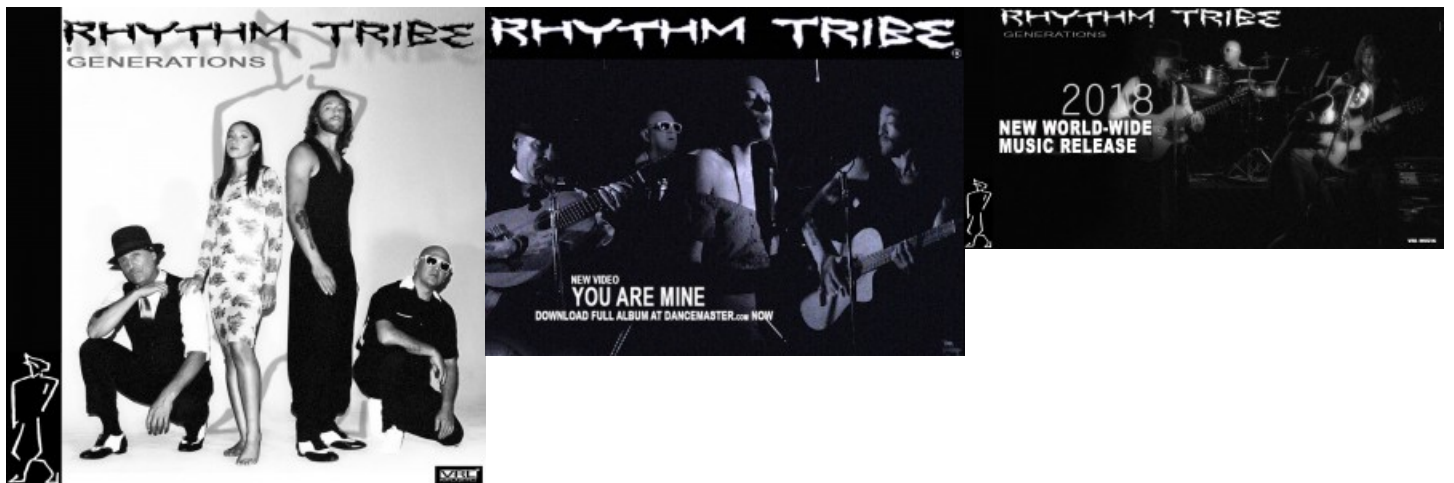

Music lovers are looking for something different than what radio is feeding them. Rhythm Tribe's new 10-song album refreshingly sounds like nothing else on the market. The group is taking their Acid Latin musical style straight to the public. This true Indie album release from VRL Music, (now available worldwide on DanceMaster.com) is not in a hurry to make a splash, or worrying about manipulating buzz. They are focused on slow unstoppable energy that is connecting and affecting the world of Pop and Latin music with their unique rhythmic invention.

The new "Generations" project was recorded at NRG Recording Studios, North Hollywood, CA over a three-day period and mastered by Howie Weinberg. Their musical mastery and Acid Latin approach takes this Rhythm Tribe to a new level in rhythm and the next level in music.
