

John Richey Surprises Fans with Unannounced Single Release Ahead of November Project

Kansas City, Oct 30, 2019 (Issuewire.com) - In anticipation of his November 14th release to major streaming platforms, John Richey surprises fans with an unannounced single released exclusively to SoundCloud, in the name of Halloween and all that is dark and spooky. Relying heavily on dark and ominous descriptions, "Medics (Prod. Classixs)" is an instant thriller worthy of a spin while splayed out around your ouija board.

Kansas City's John Richey emerged onto the music scene in 2017 with his first major project "Basement Tapes", ending the year with a total of four self-produced projects while having opened for artists such as Skippa da Flippa, Dalima, and Strange Music's JL, among others. John quickly followed up his 2017 success with the single "What You Like", which has gone on to amass more than 100,000+ streams after its early 2018 release. Following up a short run of minor releases to SoundCloud, John Richey returned with numerous tracks in 2019 including "Palace", which features fellow Kansas City artist Sistine Chapel, "Part of Me", that has gone on to receive over 250,000+ streams, as well as his latest major release, "Sharks", which saw its first month streaming sales donated to Project AWARE and their fight towards ocean preservation.

John looks to be finishing out 2019 with his upcoming single release slated for November 14th entitled "Worry 'Bout Me", a deep jazzy-track that details the anxieties, fears and struggles that artists, and non-artists, face throughout their everyday life. Find "Worry 'Bout Me" on all major streaming platforms on November 14th!
