

All Office Opens New Office Space Access In Western Province

Los Angeles, Mar 11, 2020 (IssueWire.com) - AllOffice.Space has set itself as a leader in the shared office and coworking industry, having reached nearly every major market in North America as well as other international sites. Now, Chris Allen, Director of Sales & Marketing, is pleased to announce his Toronto, Ontario, Canada based company is expanding to the west, opening up new AllOffice.Space access in Alberta.

“This really is a great day for us. We have been wanting to move further west with the goal of being coast to coast in our great country. This represents another important step in that direction, as well as the power of growth. More people are going to be coming to work because of our expansion project,” said Allen.

Plans are to have 14 new private buildings and shared desks in both Calgary and Edmonton.

Customers will be afforded their own private phone lines, fast Internet and courier services. The simplicity of AllOffice.Space means keeping their overhead costs at a minimum while being able to maximize profits within their small businesses. Our offices grow when you do!

“Any time there is business growth it is a good thing. We already have people interested in what we have to offer, and most of the locations are over 86% committed. We do encourage all businesses needing a location for up to 30% less than they can find elsewhere to contact us. We will help you with a perfect office,” continued Allen.

Additional information, including floor plans of current locations, is on the website. Go to www.alloffice.space for more.
