

Annemarie Gallagher, MD, an Interventional Pain Management Physician with Epion Institute

Get to know Interventional Pain Management Physician Dr. Annemarie Gallagher, who serves patients in Las Vegas, Nevada.

New York City, Jul 22, 2020 (IssueWire.com) - Dr. Gallagher is a top interventional pain management physician who serves as the owner & operator of Epion Institute in Las Vegas, Nevada. She is committed to treating pain following sports injuries, accidents, or resulting from disease, surgery, aging, and congenital conditions using a variety of treatments, including spine and joint injections. After thorough examination and testing, several options may be used individually or together with the goal of decreasing and potentially eliminating pain.

Born and raised in New York City, Dr. Gallagher became interested in pain management as a result of her experience as a first responder on 9/11. Seeing firefighters and police officers being wheeled into the trauma unit at St. Vincent's Hospital, she knew that pain would linger long after their wounds healed.

Pursuing a career in medicine, she earned her medical degree from the Renaissance School of Medicine at Stony Brook University in 2007. Thereafter, she trained at some of the top medical institutions in the country, including an internship in internal medicine at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine / Montefiore Medical Center; a residency in physical medicine & rehabilitation at NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital; and the Weill Cornell Tri-Institute Pain Fellowship within the Department of Anesthesiology at NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital.

Licensed to practice medicine in Nevada and New York, the doctor is board-certified in pain medicine & physical medicine and rehabilitation at the American Board of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation (ABPMR). The mission of the ABPMR is to serve the public by improving the quality of patient care in physical medicine and rehabilitation. This is accomplished through a process of certification and maintenance of certification that fosters excellence and encourages continuous learning.

Committed to alleviating spine and joint pain in patients in need, Dr. Gallagher is a contributing author to several books that are classics in the treatment of pain. Most recently, she published a chapter that is included in Peripheral Nerve Entrapments: Clinical Diagnosis and Management.

Among her various accolades, she is the recipient of the Falcon Award for Patient Care and the Physician of the Year Award by NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital, Columbia, the Fellow of the Year Award by NewYork-Presbyterian Hospital, Cornell, the On-Time Doctor Award (2016, 2017, 2018), the Patients' Choice Award (2016, 2017, 2018), and Compassionate Doctor Recognition (2016, 2017, 2018).

Interventional pain management or interventional pain medicine is a medical subspecialty which treats pain with invasive interventions such as facet joint injections, nerve blocks (interrupting the flow of pain signals along specific nervous system pathways), neuroaugmentation (including spinal cord stimulation and peripheral nerve stimulation), vertebroplasty, kyphoplasty, nucleoplasty, endoscopic discectomy, and implantable drug delivery systems. Interventional pain medicine physicians may be able to figure out and treat the cause of a patient's pain, and direct them for the right treatment options after determining the most likely pain generators.

Outside of practicing medicine, Dr. Gallagher is an avid runner and enjoys traveling and photography. She is fluent in both English and Spanish.
