

Challenges People Face When Buying Diamonds, And Jewelry

Surat, Oct 12, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - Getting natural diamonds and jewelry is quite a challenge if you do not have the right source. Small jewelry retailers, newbie jewelry designers, and jewelry hobbyists face the following challenges when sourcing for natural diamonds and jewelry;

- Fixed minimum order quantity- Wholesalers and stores offer a fixed MOQ; hence you cannot buy diamonds or jewelry in small quantities. As a retailer, you may not afford the large quantities, and it is a big challenge while purchasing the diamond and jewelry.
- Local wholesalers and jewelry stores do not offer specific sizes, inconveniencing the buyers.
- Lack of knowledge- In most stores, you will find that the employees are in charge of daily operations. The employees do not have sufficient knowledge about diamonds, and sometimes they sell the diamonds and jewelry at higher prices.
- Unavailability of diamonds- In stores, you can only find GIA, certified, or colorless diamonds. If you do not have enough money to buy those diamonds, you may lack a solution and fail to buy them. Most local stores and wholesalers do not have black diamonds, salt and pepper diamonds, or icy diamonds; hence, your choices are limited to only a few selections.

- Taxes- When you buy diamonds and jewelry from local stores, you will need to pay taxes per the federal laws in most cases. The taxes can be avoided if you import the diamond and jewelry directly from manufacturers at low prices.
- The cost of diamonds and jewelry is higher at the stores because they spend a lot by doing advertisements, paying rent for the stores, and paying the employees.
- Go-betweens- If you find diamond or jewelry in the local store, it has probably been handled by a lot of intermediaries. Each go-between contributes to the rise in the price of the jewelry and diamonds, and by the time they reach the final buyer, they are so expensive that the final buyers cannot afford them.
- In most local stores, once you buy the diamond or jewelry, you cannot get your money back even when you find that the diamond is not of the right quality.

There are many other challenges that we cannot exhaust in this article. If you are a local retailer or a jewelry hobbyist, as Gemone Diamonds, we can help you evade the issues mentioned above. Read on to discover more about Gemone Diamonds.
