

La Creme Reveals Online Fashion Show for Cancer Research with Patricia Pinto, Monica Pinto & Francesca Pinto

A virtual fashion show benefiting cancer research was announced today by La Creme Modeling & Acting Agency's CEO Patricia Pinto. It is a benefit show for La Creme Angels and will take place via Zoom.

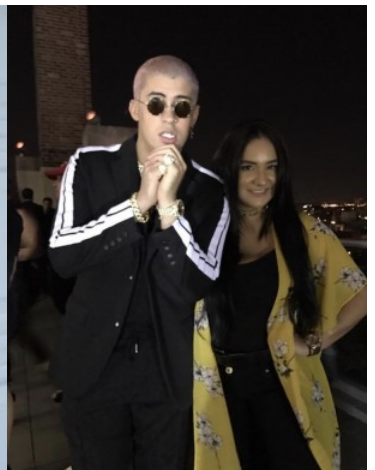

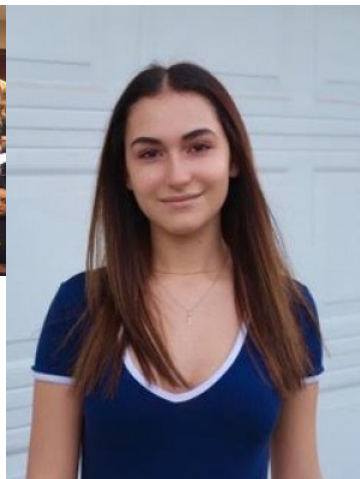

Westfield, Oct 28, 2020 (IssueWire.com) - The anticipated date of La Creme and La Creme Angels' New Jersey Fashion Week show was revealed today by Patricia Pinto and Francesca Pinto. The 2020 show had to be postponed due to the ongoing coronavirus pandemic. This benefit show will be occurring online, November 14, 2020, at 12:00 PM. La Creme NJFW is a benefit show for cancer research.

Monica Pinto, one of the lead event planner's and CEO of Hymosis Visuals says "This is our first time doing a fashion show virtually but we will rehearse and make it our best show yet." Francesca Pinto says she agrees.

La Creme has hosted many fashion shows in the past and they get better every time. They've even held shows in other cities like Miami, Paris and Santo Domingo before. Proceeds from the benefit fashion show will support breast cancer. The event is one of many ways La Creme continues to provide comprehensive diversity programming that supports the designers' and participants' social needs by giving access to free and low-cost high-quality care for breast cancer patients.

La Creme Modeling & Acting Agency is a talent agency based in NJ, NYC, Miami, & Los Angeles that has been around for well over 30 years, enhancing the dreams of thousands of children, young adolescents and adults of both genders all over planet earth.

More information and instructions on how to watch the show can be found at La Creme's announcement.
