Los Angeles, Oct 12, 2020 (IssueWire.com) - MadKix, a new social media app, similar to TikTok, but much different in terms of user experience, video sharing, and their unique Social Editing feature, will launch their beta testing later this week.

This beta testing period will be to work out all of the unique features within the app including the first of its kind Social Editing component that will allow users to interact with others' videos by taking and modifying their existing content in their own mad way and post on that existing thread.

Become a MadKix beta tester today before the app is launched to all iOS and Android users later in the fall.

MadKix is being developed by Arcia LLC, a technology startup based in Southern California. Arcia, led by CEO Brian Zheng, is developing multiple cutting edge apps and web products intended to disrupt how society uses video, social media, and e-commerce. Zheng has already had extensive experience developing and releasing playable mobile games available on both Android and iOS, making them available to anyone with a smart device.
