

Be Thrilled With the Electronically Charged Indie-Pop Numbers from the UK Artist Simon Jacobs

Witness the unique proclamation of the evolving reality with the terrific discography of the British pop artist Simon Jacobs who has become the face of the pop world.

London, Nov 18, 2020 (IssueWire.com) - Releasing the forthcoming album '12 Colours' quietly, Simon Jacobs is hovering at the apex of celebration with the newest crowning glory. After waiting for a year, the fans can finally take a breath of relief with the release of the album. The world was waiting with its bated breath to hear some new melodies from the upcoming British singer who has astonished his followers with his organic style of indie-pop music. The album sketches twelve characters with twelve pristine singles. The masterwork of presenting several shades of a normal man in a timeless space is the brainchild produced from the alter-ego of the priceless vocalist.

With a stiff jump from the ditty intro, the song 'Make It Happen' begins to unfold a heartbroken truth. Singing about love and space in a relationship, he is left to live with the void at the end. The lachrymose melodies are the signature features of his underrated musicality. It changes its nature from a love song to a sugarcoated ending of a blooming relationship as it gets overstuffed with plaintive vocals. Fighting against the loneliness that cripples him with the darkness of negativity, he paints pictures of the ruins of the present society in the new song 'Who'll Be There?'. The immersive staccato tunes are balanced in harmony with the fluorescent pop rhythms.

Simon Jacobs finds inspiration from the contemporary issues that no one wants to talk about. Singing about the problems with no solution, he tries to make his commentary more valid. His followers understand the urgency in his songs and delve deeper into the cause that gives a rise to the anarchy in the system. 'Smart Speakers' is a song about the technological advancement that will eventually bring the downfall for mankind. There is a chance that your whole life is being monitored by the AI that you've brought to look cool for your friends.
