

dotNow Returns to the Internet

Former “Dot Com Darling” reincarnated as a free Internet business opportunity and online savings portal that offers users an average savings of $4,000 annually on products and services that they are already purchasing.

Richmond, Dec 9, 2020 (Issuewire.com) - Richmond, VA— December 9, 2020 — dotNow, a mainstay of the “Web 1.0” era, today returns to the Internet as an online business opportunity that is free to join, as well as an online savings portal that saves the average user over $4,000 per year on products and services that they already purchase. Before, dotNow was a free Internet service provider based in Des Moines, Iowa, allowing users to connect to the Internet for free over dial-up telephone networks.

“We recognize that lots of people are hurting economically,” said Dan Briere, President at dotNow. “This year represented a unique opportunity to revive a popular Internet brand and deliver real solutions that millions of Americans and other people across the world are looking for that we simply could not ignore. We help people increase their income and also save money on things they’re already spending for.”

Positive Customer Impact

dotNow’s online business opportunity has in fact existed since 2004, with plenty of longevity, history, and success stories of Internet incomes built from scratch. The company partnered with a worldwide leader in Internet services to deliver the business opportunity.

Likewise, the savings portal is in fact nearly 20 years old. Here again, dotNow has partnered with an existing service provider to scale quickly and offer the best solution possible to millions of expected worldwide users.

“Our objective is simply to serve others,” said Mr. Briere. “If we can do that by helping them save money on the things they’re already purchasing, that is fantastic and a big win in our books! If we can do that by helping them – for free! – to create a business on the Internet, that is even better.”
