ABOUT DIAMONDFIRE APPAREL BOUTIQUE:

Afi Fennick, founder of the Diamondfire Apparel boutique is a self-taught fashion seamstress and an indie fashion designer. In her mid-twenties, she purchased her first sewing machine online and started investigating how different articles of clothing are made. She began teaching herself how to sew fashion clothing, create fashion patterns, sketch designs and diagram them. Up to date, she has made a few faux fur jackets, a pair of leggings, stylish blouses, and bandeau dresses with multiple patterns and designs. She emphasizes in her last fashion interview how she has great respect for more experienced seamstresses than herself. How it does take a lot of work and patience to really indulge in fashion sewing and how the fancier any item of clothing is, the more seamstress work will be required to complete each design successfully.

From December 2018 – March 2019, she has had fashion collaborations with two indie fashion models through fashion photography shoots and fashion art photography production. Her complete fashion biography, her design portfolio, and fashion resume are all available on her indie fashion blog.

“Fashion design is something I look forward to as a career. It is a strong passion. I have a keen eye for it, and I look forward to releasing, constantly showcasing, and growing from my talents.”

She now creates digital fashion art designs for fashion t-shirts and clothing and looks forward to producing an ambassadors collection for men. She has unwavering faith that one day her services will grow internationally and abundantly.
