Launching EnableOA: An Open Access Publishing Platform

New York, New York City, Mar 1, 2021 (Issuewire.com) - The Amnet and Coko Foundation partnership has paved the way for EnableOA: an open access publishing platform for the scholarly community. It is a comprehensive framework with a slew of modular and smart features that allow customization of the platform to best suit the publishing requirements of a user. The platform is designed to reduce publishing cost and time while supporting greater collaboration, research and development integrity, distribution, and transparency.

Open access has been an incredible step toward making scholarly publication easily accessible that not only benefits the scholarly community but also the wider society. As part of this launch, Amnet is releasing ReachOA, powered by Kotahi (a full-featured OA publishing platform that can simplify and optimize end-to-end publishing) and BookOA, powered by Editoria (a web-based book editing and production tool that allows entire publishing life cycle workflow management through an intuitive interface). Publishers will now have the flexibility to manage end-to-end publishing processes for a range of publications including journals, books, articles, and more through these interfaces.

Open web-based interfaces can be easily integrated with other services and external publishing platforms, making it easy to index and distribute publications across the network. With the launch of this platform, the intention is to advance the adoption of open access publishing by simplifying workflow management and content distribution. By publishing content using this platform, users can improve indexing, discoverability, and accessibility while driving greater impact and extending their reach to the broadest audiences. With the Amnet-Coko partnership, publishers can expand their reach, optimize costs, and enhance their publications.
