Get to know Speech-Language Pathologist, Abbey Lee Johnson, who serves patients in Durham, North Carolina.

New York City, New York Dec 7, 2021 (IssueWire.com) - A committed speech-language pathologist, Abbey is affiliated with Carolina Speak Now in Durham, North Carolina. She has experience working with a number of different diagnoses and disorders, including autism spectrum disorder, developmental delays, cerebral palsy, receptive and expressive language delays, intellectual disabilities, phonological disorders, articulation disorders, and with the deaf and hard of hearing population.

Carolina Speak Now is a growing multidisciplinary practice providing in-home speech and developmental therapy in North Carolina. They are a dedicated team of speech and language pathologists who believe in compassionate, personalized therapy. Their therapists have a wealth of knowledge, advanced training, and skills that are unmatched. They are dedicated to helping patients and their families achieve their goals.

Before embarking on her professional journey, Abbey graduated from UNC-Chapel Hill with a Bachelor of Science degree in Psychology. She then attended North Carolina Central University (NCCU) where she earned her Master of Science degree in Speech-Language Pathology. During her time at NCCU, she participated in a specialty track including additional coursework and received specialized training in the areas of Alternative and Augmentative Communication (AAC), cultural and linguistic diversity, conducting research, and early intervention.

Believing that everybody has a voice, she has worked very closely with autism and AAC on building necessary language skills. She loves creating new materials that are specific to each child. She has a strong passion for the pediatric population and believes therapy should encompass an interdisciplinary approach and fully believes it is a team effort that includes the parents. Also, one of her core beliefs is the importance of providing culturally and linguistically diverse services that are tailored to the client.

Speech-language pathology is a field of expertise practiced by a clinician known as a speech-language pathologist (SLP) or a speech therapist. SLPs treat and diagnose speaking disabilities. They help patients with articulation, stuttering, fluency, the rhythm of speech, and more. Additionally, they may treat patients who have difficulty with language and social skills. Patients see SLPs for a variety of reasons, including relearning language after an accident, overcoming a voice disorder, enhancing social communication skills, as well as improving speaking clarity.
