

'What I Did For Love' by O'Neill Fernandes will Relieve Hearts and Minds Through Old Music Nostalgia

O'Neill Fernandes will soon release the latest album titled 'What I Did For Love'. The instrumental covers of 21 songs will make listeners cherish the old days

Perth, Jun 25, 2022 (Issuewire.com) - O'Neill Fernandes will release his latest album on Tuesday, 28th June. The artist is unstoppable in his endeavor to give his fans some quality music. The album, 'What I Did For Love', is officially the 34th album of the artist. The album comprises collections of love ballads released in the period between 1959 and 2009. It has a total of 21 songs. These are the songs loved and appreciated by music lovers of different generations. The title track, 'What I Did For Love', is officially a song by Engelbert Humperdinck, released in 2009, on his album 'Engelbert Volume 1'.

Another instrumental cover is of a song by Leonard Cohen- 'Dance Me to the End of Love'. The song was released in 1984 on the album Various Positions. O'Neill seems to have loved this song and enjoyed it while recreating it. One of the most sensational performances in the album is 'Lovefool'. The main thing that makes his listeners so engaged with his songs is the blending of originality with his own improvisations. The songs of the album, once again, will draw attention to his versatility in playing the electric guitar. Moreover, the pure instrumental covers release a sense of harmony that will soothe the mind of the listeners.

One of the most famous songs of its time and is always taken as a tribute to the glory of Bob Marley, 'Is This Love', has found a redefinition by the artist's hands-on expertise in music. The essence remains the same; however, it is rejuvenated through the modern musical arrangements. So, listen to the latest album, 'What I Did For Love' on Soundcloud. Artist O'Neill Fernandes turns out to be one of the most versatile and rapidly growing music composers. Follow him on Facebook, YouTube, and Linkedin for more updates.
