Back in 2013, Dr. Wu graduated with his Doctor of Osteopathic Medicine degree from Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine. Heart failure and transplant cardiology represents advanced training in cardiovascular disease and focuses on the management of advanced or complicated heart failure beyond the scope of what is usually provided by general internists and general cardiologists. However, consultative and co-management services for other physicians managing patients with heart failure are often a significant aspect of practice.

On a more personal note, Dr. Wu is fluent in both English and Chinese.
