

Pizza Donut Featured on CNBC's Funny Business with JANE WELLS -

New York City, New York May 5, 2023 (Issuewire.com) - Kosher International, Inc., has made headlines with its innovative product, the Pizza Donut. CNBC reporter Jane Wells recently visited the company's headquarters to interview the President and CEO, Richard H. Davis, and learn more about this first-of-its-kind creation that is taking New York City by storm.

According to Davis, the Pizza Donut is "garlic bread pizza in the shape of a doughnut," made from bagel dough and baked instead of boiled. The company claims that these unique donuts can even lower cholesterol, making them a healthier option for customers. Vendors can sell the product for approximately one dollar, with a profit margin of an impressive sixty-six percent.

"We are thrilled to see the Pizza Donut featured on CNBC's Funny Business with Jane Wells," said Davis. "This exposure will help us to bring this delicious and unique product to even more customers across the city and beyond."

The Pizza Donut has quickly become the comfort food of the millennium, and Kosher International, Inc.,

is leading the charge in bringing this tasty treat to the masses. With the holiday season approaching, the Pizza Donut is sure to be a hit at parties and gatherings.
