Delaware city, Delaware Jun 13, 2023 (IssueWire.com) - Allegiant Air, a prominent low-cost airline, offers a comprehensive cancellation policy to accommodate passengers' changing travel plans. Understanding the cancellation policy is crucial to ensure a seamless and hassle-free experience. Familiarizing yourself with Allegiant cancellation policy can help you navigate any unforeseen circumstances and make informed decisions regarding your reservations.

How to cancel Allegiant Air flights?

- Go to the official Allegiant Air website (www.allegiantair.com).
- Sign in to your Allegiant Air account using your login credentials. It is easy to create one account if you do not have one already.
- Select the "My Trips" or "Manage Travel" option on the Allegiant website.
- Enter Allegiant booking details, including your confirmation number and last name, to access your ticket.
- Find the specific flight you want to cancel and click on the cancellation option.
- After completing the cancellation process, you should receive a confirmation email or notification stating that your flight has been canceled.

What does the Allegiant Air cancellation policy state?

Allegiant Airlines cancellation policy outlines the guidelines and fees associated with canceling a flight. Allegiant Air allows passengers to cancel their reservations within 24 hours of booking without incurring any fees. If you cancel your flight beyond the 24-hour window, fees will apply. The amount of the fee depends on factors such as the fare type, the timing of the cancellation, and whether you purchased Trip Flex (more on that below).

How much does it cost to cancel Allegiant Air flights?

If you have a standard fare ticket and cancel your flight, Allegiant Air typically charges a cancellation fee per passenger, per segment (one-way). Passengers who purchased Trip Flex, an optional service, enjoy more flexibility with changes and cancellations. If you have Trip Flex and cancel your flight, you can do so without incurring any additional Allegiant cancellation fees. However, please note that the cost of Trip Flex itself is non-refundable.

If you cancel your Allegiant Air flight within 24 hours of booking and the booking was made at least one week (168 hours) before the scheduled departure time, you are generally eligible for a full refund. This is in accordance with Allegiant Air's 24-hour cancellation policy or Allegiant Airlines Refund policy.
