

Grids & Dots Invoke a Sense of Dreamy Escapism with their New Song 'Pink Plaster Walls'

The talented music group from Australia Grids & Dots brings a burst of refreshing creative energy and ethereal indie pop flavors in their new single 'Pink Plaster Walls'.

Sydney, Jun 19, 2023 (IssueWire.com) - Creating a delicate fusion of indie pop with ethereal tones and expressive vocals, the Australian music group, with Daniel Handaru and Carmen Minikusas as visual designers, and Pat Hisshion on drums, Grids & Dots, has released their immersive new single 'Pink Plaster Walls'. Amidst the interwoven layers of vivid imagery with a subtle yet unmistakable sense of identity, the song presents a passionate venture into a hypnotic realm of melliflence and carries listeners along in its stream of melody. The reverb-soaked number takes the form of an enchanting shoegaze that presents the audience with warm and dreamy escapism, taking on the note of a timeless musical experience.

In 'Pink Plaster Walls' the band brings a convergence of chorus-like vocals ringing a higher octave juxtaposed with a mellow vibe and simple yet striking instrumentation, creating a contemplative zone of harmony and rhythms, powered by the strength of song-writing, leading to verses that resonate deep within the hearts of the listeners. These relatable and compelling reflections paired with the stimulating layers of synth create a blissful arena of dynamic sound design that transcends the confines of genre.

Aimed at capturing the sounds of their busy inner-city lives with snippets of melody and romance, the lead songwriter Daniel Handaru encapsulates the visual tidbits of his life into a mix of fruit-salad poetry and unique observations about the everyday. Influenced by the harmonies of 80s synth-pop, detuned guitars, and shoegaze bands of the later decade, Grids & Dots are focused on balancing melody with a reverb-saturated impressionistic sense of the cities they live in, experimenting with the boundaries of indie pop.
