Kochi, Kerala Jun 26, 2023 (IssueWire.com) - Remove iron from water or wastewater. Iron can cause discoloration, staining, and unpleasant taste in water, and can also lead to clogging and damage to equipment in industrial processes. The removal process typically involves oxidizing the iron to a solid form that can be filtered out, or chemically precipitating the iron and then separating it from the water. Iron removal plants can be implemented in a variety of settings, including residential, commercial, and industrial applications.
