Pertaining to her educational pursuits, she received her medical degree from the UConn School of Medicine in 1994. She then went on to complete her residency in internal medicine and her fellowship in hematology/oncology at the Louisiana State University School of Medicine in 1998 and 2001, respectively.

Dedicated to clinical excellence, the doctor is board-certified in medical oncology and internal medicine by the American Board of Internal Medicine (ABIM). The ABIM is a physician-led, non-profit, independent evaluation organization driven by doctors who want to achieve higher standards for better care in a rapidly changing world.

In order to remain up to date in her field, Dr. Lehrich is an active member of the American College of Physicians, the American Society of Clinical Oncology, and the Florida Medical Association.

Oncology is a branch of medicine that deals with the prevention, diagnosis, and treatment of cancer. A medical professional who practices oncology is an oncologist. An oncologist is a doctor who treats cancer and provides medical care for a person diagnosed with cancer. They lead a cancer treatment team of various healthcare professionals, treat patients with radiation therapy, coordinate treatment plans, and prescribe various types of treatment, including chemotherapy and immunotherapy, as well as assist patients with pain management. Dr. Lehrich participates in clinical trials involving all solid and liquid tumors. In addition, she participates in active screening programs for at-risk populations.

On a more personal note, Dr. Lehrich attributes her success to her compassion, discipline, and sense of humor. In her free time, she enjoys going to the beach, water activities, writing, knitting, and learning about information technology as it integrates with modern practices.
