He is an experienced negotiator, proactive communicator, and budget/finance manager with a strong focus on fulfilling the unique requirements of his clients. Additionally, he is someone who appreciates how significant finding the right home and right investment can be in living one's best life.

"I have long appreciated the value of real estate both from a personal and a financial perspective. Years ago at West Hills Elementary School in the town where I grew up, I had a teacher, his name I can't remember now, who talked to us about the various properties he owned. He may have owed a ton of money as a result, but it was all working for him and he was on track to retire early and live well. I never forgot about the opportunities that real estate can provide. Since then, my appreciation of the value of property has continued and with more life experience, this has broadened to include an interest in architecture, culture and community as well."

Specializing in the Queens area, particularly Forest Hills, where he and his family have called home for nearly two decades, Bruce has cultivated deep connections within the community. Over the years, he has actively taken on leadership roles in various volunteer organizations, serving as the President of the Forest Hills Gardens Homeowners Association and leading the Forest Hills Gardens Foundation. Currently, he presides over the West Side Tennis Club, once the prestigious venue for the US Open, where he indulges in his passion for tennis.

Crediting his success to a continuous process of learning and active listening, Bruce consistently grows, stays motivated, and maintains unwavering energy in his profession. His genuine love for his job stems from the opportunity to connect with people from diverse walks of life.
