London, United Kingdom Jan 25, 2024 (IssueWire.com) - This pioneering technology, now live on their UK site (uk.clickajobs.com), marks a significant leap in how job seekers interact and find opportunities in an increasingly digital world.

Lucy Veeone, developed in collaboration with the Bangalore-based division of WhatJobs.com, WhatJobs.AI, is not just another digital tool; it's a paradigm shift in job-searching methodology. Unlike traditional job search engines that rely on keyword matching, Lucy Veeone brings a uniquely human touch to the digital realm. She understands long-tail, human-style conversations, allowing users to interact as they would with a real-life recruitment consultant.

In a bold step, ClickaJobs has completely removed the conventional search box from their platform, placing full confidence in Lucy's capabilities. This decision underscores their belief in Lucy Veeone's advanced AI technology to handle all inquiries, demonstrating a level of sophistication unmatched in the industry.

Ayman Rehman, Head of AI Development at WhatJobs.AI, expressed immense pride in this collaborative achievement: "I have been working closely with both Leo & Graham at ClickaJobs, and we are immensely proud of Lucy. She is a first-version prototype and learning every day."

Lucy's capabilities have been compared with many leading competitors, and the consensus is clear – none can match the search experience she offers. This sentiment echoes the innovative spirit of ClickaJobs.com and WhatJobs.AI's venture, setting a new standard for job search platforms worldwide.

Graham Hirst's collaboration with WhatJobs.AI represents a unique synergy between two forward-thinking entities. WhatJobs.com has been at the forefront of developing search resolving in the USA, and this partnership is a first-of-its-kind collaboration using their AI technology. Together, they have crafted an AI advisor that not only understands the nuances of human communication but also continuously evolves and learns, ensuring an ever-improving user experience.

As Lucy Veeone enters the market as a prototype, the potential for growth and learning is immense. ClickaJobs.com invites users to test Lucy for themselves and witness the future of job searching. This invitation isn't just to use a new tool; it's an opportunity to be part of a revolution in how we connect with job opportunities.
