With a profound dedication to her profession, she takes pride in her unique ability to connect with patients on a deeper level, offering not only medical expertise but also compassionate understanding.

The doctor's acclaimed career in medicine began after she embarked on her journey in private practice immediately after graduating Cum Laude with a Doctorate of Veterinary Medicine from Washington State University. Throughout her career, she has consistently demonstrated a commitment to the welfare of animals, particularly in critical situations, where her skills are put to the test.

Beyond her clinical and administrative responsibilities, Dr. Hoggan has showcased her commitment to advancing the dialogue around veterinary care and pet loss grief. Her two insightful TEDxTemecula talks highlight her expertise, and delve into the complex emotional aspects of veterinary medicine. Her first talk discusses why euthanizing your pet is such a profoundly difficult decision, and why it echoes in your head, and your heart, for so long afterward. Her second talk was a natural follow up to the first; discussing the validity of pet loss grief. Dr. Hoggan thoughtfully explains why pet loss grief is so difficult; and how understanding that grief can be the first step to feeling better.

Finally Dr. Hoggan is also an author, having been published in professional journals as well as having on blog on PsychologyToday.com called Fluent in Fur.

A veterinarian is a medical professional who protects the health and well-being of both animals and people. They diagnose and control animal diseases and treat sick and injured animals. They also advise owners on proper care of their pets and livestock. Veterinarians provide a wide range of services in private practice, teaching, research, government service, public health, military service, private industry, and other areas.
