Common Mistakes to Avoid on Canada eTA Application

When applying for a Canada eTA, it is important to avoid making any mistakes. Here are some of the most common mistakes to avoid:

- Not providing accurate information. When filling out the Canada eTA application form, it is important to provide accurate information. This includes your name, date of birth, passport number, and other personal details.
- Not paying the application fee. You must pay the application fee in order for your application to be processed.
- Not submitting your application early enough. The Canada eTA is valid for five years, but it is only valid for the specific passport that you used to apply for it. If you lose your passport or it expires before your eTA expires, you will need to apply for a new eTA. It is important to submit your application early enough so that you have plenty of time to receive your eTA before you travel to Canada. Apply at least 24 to 72 hours earlier.

By avoiding these common mistakes, you can increase your chances of having your Canada eTA application approved.

Types of Canada eTA

There are mainly four main types of Canada eTA - transit, tourism, business, and medical treatment visits. Each type is based on the purpose of the visit to Canada. The transit eTA is for those who are passing through Canada and not staying for any length of time. On the other hand, the tourism eTA is for those visiting Canada for vacation or exploring the country. Similarly, the business eTA is reserved for individuals traveling to Canada for business purposes such as conferences, meetings or networking events. The last type, the medical treatment eTA, is typically for those who are traveling to Canada to receive specific medical treatment. The requirements and validity may vary based on the type and purpose of your visit.

Processing Time and Validity of Canada eTA

The processing time for Canada's eTA for all citizens is usually 24 to 72 hours. However, it can take longer during peak travel season. You can check the status of your Canada eTA application online.

The validity of Canada's eTA for Belgian citizens is 5 years or until the expiry of your passport, whichever comes first. You can enter Canada multiple times during the validity of your Canada eTA. However, each stay cannot exceed 90 days.

If you need to stay in Canada for more than 90 days, you will need to apply for a Canada visitor visa.

Frequently Asked Questions about eTA Canada Visa

Q1. What is a Canada eTA and who needs it?

- The Canada Electronic Travel Authorization (eTA) is a mandatory travel permit for visa-exempt foreign nationals traveling to Canada by air for tourism, business, or transit. This includes citizens from most European Union countries, Australia, Japan, and U.S. permanent residents.
