

Education 2.0 Conference 2024 To Review Rising Concerns Of EdTech Software Fraud

At this 3-day education event, experts will convene to review educational software scam offenses and fraud while highlighting legit tools and effective solutions.

Las Vegas, Nevada Feb 6, 2024 (Issuewire.com) - The Education 2.0 Conference 2024, set to take place at the Caesars Palace, Las Vegas, USA, from March 18–20, 2024, will bring together educators, researchers, policymakers, educational institutions, and EdTech startups from around the globe. This three-day event will serve as a platform for industry leaders to collaborate, innovate, and address pressing education sector issues.

The upcoming edition of the Education 2.0 Conference will shine a spotlight on the rising concerns surrounding spam/scam offenses related to educational software. With the proliferation of digital learning tools, the conference aims to provide insights into distinguishing between legitimate educational resources and fraudulent offerings. Attendees can expect discussions on the importance of thorough reviews and vetting processes to identify potential fraud in the marketplace.

Global thought leaders of the education and learning sector will share their experiences and insights on navigating the complexities of the educational software landscape. Through interactive sessions, participants will explore effective tools and strategies for schools to safeguard against scam offenses and ensure the adoption of reliable and trustworthy educational technology solutions.

Attendees can also expect engaging discussions on a wide range of critical issues, including digital learning strategies, student engagement, equity and inclusion, future of work skills, blended learning models, data privacy and security, STEM education, professional development for educators, parents and community engagement, and well-being and mental health support.

"We're thrilled to provide a collaborative space for industry stakeholders to confront pressing issues in education," stated Shobhit Behal, Manager at the Education 2.0 Conference. "As technology rapidly integrates into education, it's crucial to stay vigilant against scams and fraud. By equipping educators with effective tools and knowledge, we empower them to safeguard the integrity of education and ensure student well-being."

In addition to addressing the pressing issue of scams in educational software, the Education 2.0 Conference will offer attendees various opportunities for networking, learning, and collaboration. Exhibit booths will showcase the latest trends and innovations in educational technology, providing attendees with firsthand experience of cutting-edge tools and solutions. Furthermore, a recognition session will applaud the changemakers and innovators driving positive change in the education industry.
