From starting as a graphic designer in 2013 to founding MPV Films in 2016, Muzamil Naseer overcame many challenges to become a filmmaker, inspiring a community of young artists and storytellers in Multan.

Multan, Punjab Jun 12, 2024 (Issuewire.com) - Muzamil Naseer sparked a creative revolution in Multan, a city hungry for meaningful stories. From the start, Muzamil wanted to be a director, though writing was just a hobby at first. He understood that being a film director meant knowing a bit about everything, like the CEO of a company. So, he began as a graphic designer in 2013, then learned videography, video editing, and sound work. Eventually, he started writing screenplays and stories, which matched his initial hobby.

In 2016, Muzamil founded Make Pakistan Visual - MPV Films, a production label. To this day, he works under this label as a writer, producer, director, and pre-production manager.

His dream was to make films that were not only entertaining but also taught life lessons. His journey wasn't easy. He faced many challenges, like a lack of resources and doubts from others. Despite these obstacles, Muzamil didn't give up. He tried three times to create meaningful films. Though these attempts failed, they taught him valuable lessons. His first film failed due to a low budget, pushing him to learn more about film production.

Building a community of young artists was also tough. Funding and bringing people together were big challenges. However, Muzamil believed strongly that stories could change the world. After years of learning, he gained the skills to write, produce, and direct films. He now offers services as a scriptwriter and provides freelance pre-production help like breakdowns, schedules, budgets, pitch decks, and business plans with financial projections.

For the past three years, Muzamil has been selling these services online, working with over 100 filmmakers worldwide. Despite many challenges, he stays committed to his vision, constantly working to create meaningful stories and support a vibrant community of artists.
