Hollywood, California Sep 16, 2024 (IssueWire.com) - Award-winning producer Diana Ramos-Santiago Carter, a producer on "American Trash," offers insights into the recently released crime thriller that marks the directorial debut of acclaimed actor Robert LaSardo. The film, distributed by Deep C Digital, premiered in North America on September 10, 2024.

Ramos-Santiago Carter highlights LaSardo's unique position as both star and director: "Robert's transition from actor to director in 'American Trash' is seamless. His years of experience in front of the camera have given him an intuitive understanding of performance and storytelling, which he leverages brilliantly behind the lens."

"American Trash" showcases LaSardo's multifaceted talents, as he not only directs but also stars as Milles Carpis, a man navigating a decaying Los Angeles rife with environmental and social challenges. The film's gritty narrative follows Carpis as he seeks justice for his murdered love interest while grappling with his own violent tendencies.

"Robert's dual role allows for an intimate portrayal of Milles Carpis," Ramos-Santiago Carter explains. "His performance is nuanced and raw, while his direction brings out the best in the entire cast."

The producer praises the stellar ensemble, including Costas Mandylor as Detective Anderson, Lorelei Linklater as Carpis' ill-fated love interest, and one of the final performances by the late Tom Sizemore. "Each actor brings depth to their character, creating a rich tapestry of performances that complement LaSardo's vision," she notes.

Ramos-Santiago Carter emphasizes the film's technical achievements: "The atmospheric cinematography and haunting score perfectly capture the film's noir-inspired tone, further testament to Robert's skill as a director."

"American Trash" is now available on major cable VOD platforms such as Dish, DirecTV, and Apple TV, as well as digital platforms including iTunes, Amazon, and Fandango.
