With decades of experience in the field, Dr. Rein specializes in various anesthesia techniques, including general anesthesia, sedation, and regional anesthesia, tailored to meet the unique needs of each patient.

Academically, he received his Doctor of Osteopathic Medicine degree in 1972 at Des Moines University College of Osteopathic Medicine and Surgery, laying a strong foundation for his medical career. General anesthesia is used to render patients completely unconscious during surgical procedures, ensuring they are pain-free and unaware of the surgery taking place. Sedation, on the other hand, provides a calming effect, making patients relaxed and comfortable while remaining responsive. Finally, regional anesthesia targets specific areas of the body, numbing them to alleviate pain during and after surgery.

His compassionate approach and commitment to patient-centered care have made him a trusted figure in the Newport News medical community.
