The company is offering a golden opportunity to spend the winter vacation in the heart of Finnish Lapland, where the northern lights paint the winter sky. Visitors are able to experience an authentic piece of Arctic culture through traditional reindeer safaris. It is also known as Santa's official hometown where tourists can celebrate centuries-old Sámi traditions along with the benefits of modern tourism facilities.

President of Carlisle Travel, Jerry Saxe said, "This experience represents the perfect blend of adventure and cultural immersion." The safari experience features educational sessions about reindeer biology and behavior, traditional sleigh rides through the pristine Arctic wilderness, and opportunities to witness the northern lights while the professional guides share cultural insights and stories throughout the journey. Reindeer safaris operate from November to April, with peak viewing conditions for the northern lights during the polar night in December and January. Therefore, winter offers the best opportunity to experience the fine amalgamation of wilderness and ancient culture.
