BRADLEY HAWKINS

Denver, Colorado Jan 27, 2025 (IssueWire.com) - Bradley Hawkins, Co-Founder and CEO of WideFi and creator of SaferNet, has achieved #1 bestseller status with his groundbreaking book "God, the Devil, and the Internet". The book offers a unique perspective on navigating the digital age while maintaining strong Christian values.

Drawing from over two decades of experience in management consulting and cybersecurity, Hawkins provides readers with practical strategies for protecting their families and businesses online while staying true to their faith. As the driving force behind SaferNet, a cutting-edge CyberSafety and Internet Control App, Hawkins brings technical expertise and spiritual insight to this timely discussion.

"The internet isn't something Christians should fear—it's a gift we can use to advance God's Kingdom," says Hawkins. "This book shows readers how to transform digital tools into powerful instruments for positive change while protecting themselves from cyber threats."

The bestselling guide addresses crucial topics including:

- Biblical strategies for maintaining faith in the digital age
- Practical cybersecurity solutions for families and businesses
- Methods for using technology to advance God's Kingdom
- Techniques for protecting against cyber threats while embracing innovation

Hawkins, a graduate of Colorado Christian University, combines his business acumen with deep spiritual conviction to offer readers a comprehensive approach to digital safety and success. Through his company WideFi and its SaferNet platform (<https://safernetvpn.com>), he continues to develop innovative solutions for cyber protection that align with Christian values.

"God, the Devil, and the Internet" is particularly relevant for small and medium-sized business owners seeking to grow their digital presence while maintaining security and biblical principles. The book provides actionable strategies for leveraging technology to build successful, value-driven enterprises.
