

Panhandle Cleaning & Restoration Responds to January Freezing Weather Emergency

Wheeling, West Virginia Mar 4, 2025 (IssueWire.com) - The extreme freezing temperatures in January brought severe challenges to homeowners and businesses across the region, leading to burst pipes, water damage, and structural issues. Panhandle Cleaning & Restoration swiftly responded to the crisis, providing emergency mitigation services to affected properties.

With temperatures plummeting well below freezing, many residents and business owners faced significant damage due to frozen and ruptured pipes. Panhandle Cleaning & Restoration's highly trained team worked around the clock to assist the community, minimizing property loss and preventing further complications caused by prolonged exposure to moisture.

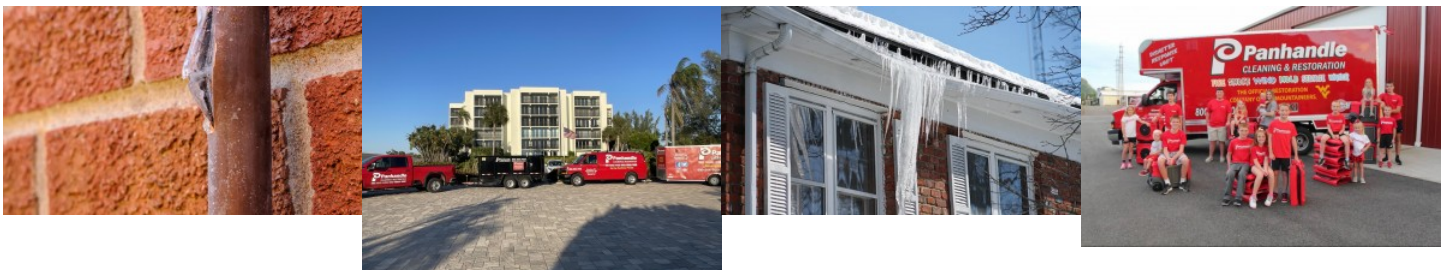

"We understand how devastating extreme weather events can be," said Josh Contraguerro, Vice President of Specialty Services at Panhandle Cleaning & Restoration. "Our team was fully mobilized, offering rapid response services to ensure our customers received the immediate attention they needed. Whether it was water extraction, drying, or structural repairs, we were there to help."

Panhandle Cleaning & Restoration urges property owners to take preventative measures ahead of future freezing weather events, including insulating pipes, keeping cabinets open to allow warm air circulation, and maintaining a consistent indoor temperature. However, in the event of an emergency, the company remains committed to providing 24/7 restoration services.
